

INTRODUCTION

As the first of its type in Afrikaans, the author is confident that this little work can be used fruitfully by everyone concerned with educating young children. Especially, university and college students pursuing courses in child play, play diagnostics, and play therapy ought to make use of it, because playing, as a form of child living, is described in it as a means of and as a matter of educating.

A word of special thanks to Mr. McAdams, Director of the Editorial Division of Butterworths, for pointers regarding the best format of print, and for his lasting enthusiasm for the publication of this work.

Also, thanks to Mr. G. Marais, University Photographer, for taking and caring for the photographs, and to professors W. A. Landman and M. C. H. Sonnekus for their interest.
